

What is the function of adhesion proteins?

- A They allow water-soluble substances to move across the membrane.
- B They help cells in a tissue stay connected to one another.
- C They have sites where substances can bind.
- D They act like molecular fingerprints that identify a cell as being of a specific type.

Adhesion proteins are glycoproteins that help cells stay connected to one another in tissues.

Answer B.

Starr C'04'24 2002-10-23