

Phenylketonuria is a homozygous recessive disorder that can be effectively treated by a special diet if detected in a newborn. If neither of these parents suffers from phenylketonuria, is there any need to test their infant?

A yes

B no

Both parents could be unaffected carriers.

Answer A.

Starr C'11'17 2002-10-23