

Which of the following would be considered homologous structures?

A the flipper of a dolphin and the tentacle of a nautilus

B the flipper of a dolphin and the arm of a koala

C the arm of a koala and the tentacle of a nautilus

Homology is a similarity in body parts that is attributable to descent from a common ancestor.

Answer B.

Starr C'18'13 2002-10-23