

What is the name of the blue-green pigment molecule that is one of the "alarm buttons" for some biological clocks in plants?

A potassium

B phycobilin

C phytochrome

D chlorophyll

This pigment switches from active to inactive form and back in response to the red light of different wavelengths.

Answer C.

Starr C'27'02 2002-10-23