

Skin color is mostly a function of the distribution of which of the following?

A fibroblasts

B lymphocytes

C melanocytes

D osteocytes

Humans generally have the same number of melanocytes, but skin color varies owing to differences in the distribution and metabolic activity of these cells.

Answer C.

Starr C'32'02 2002-10-23