

In homozygous form, a certain mutation in the gene for hemoglobin causes effects throughout the body. What is the tendency of a gene to influence seemingly unrelated traits called?

- A dominance
- B epistasis
- C pleiotropy
- D codominance

---

Pleitropy refers to the situation in which a gene produces multiple, seemingly unrelated effects.

Answer C.