

Phenylketonuria is a homozygous recessive disorder that can be effectively treated by a special diet if detected in a newborn. If neither of these parents suffers from phenylketonuria, is there any need to test their infant?

- A yes
- B no

Both parents could be unaffected carriers.
Answer A.