

How does hemoglobin in a person with sickle-cell anemia differ from normal hemoglobin?

- A Sickle-cell hemoglobin contains additional amino acids.
- B Sickle-cell hemoglobin contains fewer amino acids.
- C Sickle-cell hemoglobin contains a different sequence of amino acids.

---

The difference in the two forms of hemoglobin is the result of a single amino acid substitution.

Answer C.