

Which of these stages of the zygomycete life cycle is diploid and is formed as a result of the fusion of haploid nuclei?

- A zygosporangium
- B mycelium with sporangia

The diploid zygosporangium is formed when the hyphae of two different mating strains come into contact and their haploid nuclei fuse.

Answer A.