

What is the name of the blue-green pigment molecule that is one of the "alarm buttons" for some biological clocks in plants?

- A potassium
- B phycobilin
- C phytochrome
- D chlorophyll

---

This pigment switches from active to inactive form and back in response to the red light of different wavelengths.

Answer C.